OUT OF THE FOREST.

A STORY OF HUNGARY.

She was so gay, so careless, so loving, she perplexed me by her change of moods, and by her strange resemblance to the gipsy at Pressburg, about whom Caterina and I had talked so much. But before he had been together half-an-hour I had forgotten it all, and had grown so fond of the girl that I made her promise to pay us a visit in the valley, and to tell my mother some of her stories of her own parents, and the wild castle of Prince Z—, and about the old Jaeger who had taught her to sing. Her home was in Transylvania, she said, amongst good, quiet people, but she had been living with an aunt who was a landlady at Witten, and she had spoken of her to a cousin of Tante Anna's, who, so that she was getting old, needed help with the poultry; there were so many of them, and picking the birds was work enough for a pair of hands, to say nothing of the feeding and cleaning. Marie, that was her name, was so bright and merry, and told so many amusing stories, and was so earnest, I should stay, that I lingered long, and the sun was setting when I set off on my homeward way. Marie went with me for the first mile or two, and when we parted we embraced, and promised to meet often; and I thought, "Next time I will tell her about Gustav; perhaps she is also betrothed, and then we can talk of our lovers together. He must be a Transylvanian, and he cannot certainly be half as nice as Gustav. There is no place like the Bakonywald and the good dear folks who live there."

Ah, how beautiful the forest was that evening when the sun had quite gone away and the red light faded from the topmost branches! The trees looked so grand and solemn in the dim twilight, everything was still, a little frost was on the ground, and the dew that had fallen was crisp, and the leaves had curled themselves up more closely than ever; the birds were gone to bed and were sleeping under all their feathers, well covered up by their tails and their wings, as we are under duvets. It made me long to think how the robins and the thrushes must try to wrap their tails round their legs when the frost pinched their little toes; and where the wing-feathers wouldn't quite reach; the squirrels, I knew, were well off, rolled in a round ball like a muff, all warm for everywhere and then the rabbits!—well their ears would help, and then there were always so many of them they would keep each other warm; and so I chattered to myself, my head full of pleasant little silly thoughts; and as the wood grew thicker and the darkness deepened, I was forced to slacken my pace somewhat and choose my way; and then I heard a step amongst the crackling leaves, and Gustav's voice, and in a moment he was beside me, holding both my hands, and with his head very near mine; though it need not have been, for we were not at all the same height. Perhaps though, as the light was so dim, it was the only way he could see me; and he said, "My little wood bird, he said, in his strong tender voice, 'the mother has been wondering what had become of thee, and so I came to see.' Were you lost to come home again, Elspet?"

"Why do you ask such silly questions? Suppose I had been to an enchanted castle where there was a beautiful prince, and the prince had said, 'Elspet, I will make you a princess; do you think it likely I should ever want to come home—do you, Gustav?' and I pinched his hand a very little."

There was a young moon that night, and as it rose higher in the heavens, its pale, sweet light shone between the leaves and made our faces bright again. Gustav kissed me on the forehead, where, he said, the moonbeams had made a glory; and called me his dear, blessed little Elspet, his good angel, and many another sweet foolish name; and then he wanted me to tell him again how I loved him—as one asks the tiny children, who open their arms and say, "So much, and again so much, thousands of worlds." I remember so well how the light shone on the trunk of a large beech-tree, and how Gustav turned his face towards his with his earnest hand, and kissed me very many times, and said, "Confer, tell me truly, tell me what is in thy heart."

And I answered, "I have confessed already, and am happy and shivered. I have made my confession and have no need to open my heart to thee." And he said, "But only repeat thy confession that I may shiver thee too. Tell me, little Elspet, what didst thou confess?"

"I love Gustav."

Ah! how that pleased him. I saw the gladness in his face, and so did a little bird peeping over the edge of its nest and looking at us with kind eyes; and so we walked through the wood and thought it was Eden, and forgot everything but our two selves.

Mother was cross with me for staying so late, and said that though I was betrothed and Gustav was like a husband, still it was an ill habit for girls to get into of strolling about by night: "Moonlight or not," said mother, "girls are best at home and wives at their spinning when the sun's down." But her forehead soon grew smooth again, and she asked after Tante Anna and her rheumatism, and listened to all I could tell them, and of the beautiful new hen-girl. Mother said it was a good word of Tante Anna's to look after the girl like that; she would be out of mischief up there, and she might not have been if she had stayed in the town; and that reminded me of my first fancy and I said to Gustav, "She was just like the beautiful Zigeuner I saw at Pressburg, so like that I thought she must be the same, and I told him so."

Gustav started and looked at me with a strange perplexity in his honest face. "But she said she was from Transylvania, and laughed at me, and told me wonderful stories of her home and her parents, and the old Schloss where they live; she can talk like a book, and her tales make you smile and cry at once. I asked her to come to us here and talk to you; she would make even Annerl merry."

"You asked her to come here!" cried Gustav and then stopped. I looked at him amazed; he seemed so odd, and so strangely disturbed about nothing; but he said he must see to the horses, and went away suddenly; and I, being tired and sleepy, forgot all about my new friend and went to bed.

Another fortnight passed, and nothing happened that I need write about here. Gustav and I talked of the time when we should have a home of our own, and whether I should make good bread and porridge, and how he would play his violin while I worked; and we spoke of the animals, all the good beasts whom we were so proud of, and of our love, and the feastings, and what fields were to be sown with grain for the summer; but sometimes Gustav seemed half-dreaming, and answered me at random, or not at all. There was a change in him, and it vexed me to feel it was something so indefinable that I could not grasp it and ask him its cause. But I knew in my heart that across our clear sky had come a little cloud, no bigger than man's hand—still it was there.

What a rain of tears was to fall—what a darkness to cover my world—what a shadow of loneliness and death! And yet I hardly felt its approach, standing in the sunshine of my glad, blessed happiness.

When next I went to St. Martin'sburg the trees were bare, and a light powdering of snow was on the ground, but I didn't mind that; the cold air made my cheeks burn and sent a pleasant tingle of warmth through all my body and I hurried along the steep path, I had put on my silver ornaments and the bread belt with the onyxes which grandmother had brought with her from Transylvania, and the red ribbons in my hair that Gustav liked; and I thought he would come to meet me again, and I would hide and make great snow-balls and pelt him from behind the trees. I must not stay to write about half my thoughts; or of the peace and quietness of the still winter-scene; if I say so much about everything I shall never come to the end of my penance. Only what I saw when I reached the great Convent, will it be necessary for me to tell. I had opened the little arched door in the wall very quietly, and there I stood transfixed, leaning against the stones and looking at a new picture in the fowl-yard.

There were the defiant cocks, the bustling, scratching mother-hens, the big spring chickens, the geese fattening themselves, the brown doves, the scree of deep blue sky where the color always seemed to deepen in the corner by the bell-tower; but a tall young forester was standing with his back to me, wrapped in one of our great sheepskin coats. On her knees before him was Marie; all her black hair hung about her shoulders—the thick braids disheveled and loosened—her eyes looked large and worn with weeping—her mouth palpitated with sobs. The face, with its dark paleness, its pure passion's beauty, brought vividly before me the old Pressburg memories, in spite of her Transylvanian dress—the shirt and the gray silver ornaments, and the brilliant obsidian with its red fringes that spread over her white dress and away with the restless movements of her body. Her clasped hands held one of the man's with earnest entreaty, and she spoke rapidly in a language I could not understand.

"The Zigeuner!" I whispered, under my breath, certain how that my first impression had been the true one, as I stood quiet from very astonishment. Her companion answered her: "Dear Lueska, do not be so unhappy. I shall always care for thee; always watch over thee."

Then she spoke again, at first in her own tongue; but as though she feared he had not understood her, she added in Hungarian, "But without love I shall die—I shall die!"

"Thou shalt have that also; only be patient, he replied, in a deep soft voice. And then she threw herself on his shoulder and kissed his hands passionately, with wild words which I could not understand—I, who had understood too much already; for the soft voice was one I knew well, the caressing hands had clasped mine—how often! The tall forester was my lover; and in the broad felt hat he wore still hung the little purple ribbon I had placed there for good fortune, and the scarlet ribbon for joy.

A great sickness and faintness came over me but I still kept before my mind the one thought to get away—to hide in the forest, to hasten to shelter like a wounded fawn who goes into the woods to hide her hurt; all sense beyond the one pressing need of putting distance between them and me had left me. How I walked or ran along the path I cannot tell; but at length, weary and footsore, I sank upon a little bank of dead leaves in the depths of the forest and faced my sorrow.

Gustav was like others of whom Annerl had told me, with tender words and a false heart; that gipsy-girl must have bewitched him in the far-away time when he had been with her people, and now she had come here, under her shallow disguise, to be near him. A hundred little things came flocking into my mind, half-words of Gustav's, half thoughts of mine; put together now they seemed to mean so much. Great God! how I had loved him; he had been the whole world to me, and all the time, he had had that other face in his heart, was dreaming of it, cherishing it, even when I had believed I was reading his very soul.

In a moment my world had crumbled into ruins; my beautiful fairy-world of pleasant thoughts, of air-spun fancies, of sweet day-dreams, and, worse, my real world, the home-life, the love, the entire trust, the blessed content, the wife's faithfulness which I would have given; and, heaven!—ah! that was what made me the most wretched—it was all gone, too! I believed in God's love no longer. God could not help me, I knew, for I never could trust my love again—my love, my love! And then I wept great tears of agony, sobbing for the pitifulness of it, that I could never, never believe in him again. "O death, come for me!" I cried. "Dear death take me away into some quiet place where I may sleep and never dream!" I wept there on the ground, with my face buried in the dry brown leaves, for a time that might have been hours. I could not tell; I thought over all the past—the deceit, the treachery, I never asked, can it be true? I knew it must be; and slowly I grew hard, and then the wild pain in my heart died: I rose from the ground and smoothed my hair, and passed my hand over my face; it seemed to have grown fixed and old. "Felt as though the time when I had been happy had been very long ago. Quietly I walked home through the wood, passing the great beech-trees where the moonlight had once thrown our two shadows on the grass at its foot. My breath came a little quicker, with a quiver of pain about the heart, but I felt harder and stronger, even for such a memory as that. I made some excuse to mother to account for my not having visited the people at the Convent, and then washed my face and braided some fresh ribbons in my hair, and went about my usual work. Mother looked me a little wistfully, I thought, and father started when I spoke to him; I could not help it, but I knew my voice had changed; it was this and dry, and the color had gone out of it. Annerl came in, and Gustav, who spoke to me as usual. I was quite calm, my pulse did not beat the faster for hearing his step; my face I knew was quiet and pale, my heart was dead, and I was beyond being sorry any more.

Another week passed; often Gustav would try to speak to me in the dear old fashion with little tender word, but I answered him coldly, strangely, with hard eyes that I knew never faltered, which would never, never, melt for him.

"Annerl," I said one day, "do you ever think how long you may have to live? Don't you wish the time would go faster?"

It gave me a dismal pleasure to feel that I could talk to some one to whom life had always been dreary and fearful.

"Don't you hope you will die soon?" Annerl gazed at me with a look almost of terror in her lack-luster eyes, with open mouth, and hands that shook as she stretched them towards me.

"For mercy's sake, Elspet, don't talk to me of dying! I'm not so old as you think; there is a deal of life in me; please St. Anthony, I may live to a great age; we always were a long-lived family, and I've heard mother say her grandmother was bedridden for twenty-two years, with no more sense than that milking-stool, and lived to be a hundred!"

"But you say life is so dreary, Annerl; are you not tired of it?"

"Tired of life! Why Elspet, you must be talking in your sleep; whoever heard of anyone being tired of life? It can't be any pleasure to be laid out stiff and cold; while the neighbors gossip over you and their wine, and tell lies about you that you can't contradict."

"But heaven!" I said, "surely, for those who love it, there must be rest after all the weariness here."

"I don't tell you so," answered Annerl, "for meek, pious souls, who go smiling through their work whatever happens, and can sit through a sermon an hour long, and feel it does them good in their stomachs; but I'm that restless, I couldn't stop on a gold seat if I was there. One must have something to work one's thoughts upon. I've been so long used, you see, child, to things being contrary, that I think it would put me out dreadfully to have everything go just right; and then there are the pigs, then I'm so accustomed to being dim, that it's worked round, so that I feel a kind of pleasure in it, or at least a satisfaction. No! I'd like to outlive all my faculties down here, and when I've no more wit left, and am too blind to see the maize, grain or the pigs' troughs, and too weak to grumble, the Mother will manage the rest; and by that time I shall be too old to care where she puts me."

I turned away and at heart, I, too, might live to be a hundred; just a hard shell with a withered heart like a dry kernel, and no one would care for me, and no one have pity; for the saints would quite forget a poor little girl who prayed to them no longer.

One day I was leaning on the long wooden table under the window, smoothing carefully the pretty muslin aprons mother and I were over our dark blue gowns on Sundays, when I heard voices, and peeping round the swinging shutter, saw old Tante Anna sitting by mother on the bench by the door, and both in earnest talk: she was a queer little old woman, who looked as if she might once have been tall, but was now all head and legs, like a water-raven; she wore high black boots, strong and thick enough to resist all the wood-morasses, her short dark petticoat just reached below the knee, and she wore an over-skirt bound at either side, a sort of blue long apron bound with scarlet which hung down before and behind, and over all the heavy sheepskin coat with its fur turned inwards, and a black far collar round her wizened old throat, which was tightly muffled in the large white wrapper that was folded round her head.

"I don't like the looks of it, neighbor," Anna was saying. "My cousin from Witten vouched for her, and it was on my word that she was engaged at the Convent; but if I told you the half—and here the old head nodded emphatically, and I lost some words—I have my ears open, neighbor, and my eyes, and that girl's a heathen!"

Mother crossed herself, and said, "It's best to be charitable in speaking of others; young girls are foolish things, and you may have misjudged her; for mother had heard she came from Transylvania, and that made her heart yearn over her I know."

"Charitable," grumbled Tante Anna angrily, "when one's own character's at stake, too. Why only yesterday she refused to go to confession, and I hear her muttering strange words to herself; if she's praying to the saints, they belong to another calendar. She was as bright and clever and willing as need be when she first came, but she's under an evil spell, it's my belief. One moment she's merry, and the next weeping, and then she rambles on with her strange words when she thinks no one hears her. The girl's bewitched; and where should I be if some day the Devil carries her off on a broomstick, with all the best eggs in a basket? Ah! it's easy to laugh, but that's what'll come to."

And then another voice joined in: "You may talk of spells and witches with reason; they're in the air somewhere, and they've laid hold of our Elspet; she's pining and wasting like the girl at Bask, whose wicked cousin kept a waxed doll in a cupboard that was her very image, and stuck pins into it till the poor thing would have died if the magic work hadn't been found out, and put a stop to it. Why, Elspet, who used to be the merriest girl in the Bakonywald, is so changed you'd hardly know her. She asked me last week if I didn't wish to die. Somebody has been sticking pins into something that has to do with her."

"Silence," cried mother; "who dares talk of witches and evil eyes in the same breath as my child's name! An idle tongue makes a sore heart, and that's the worst style of pin-sticking ever I came across."

"Don't be angered with me, sister-in-law; I'd bite my tongue out before it should say an ill word of Elspet. Don't mind when she was a little baby, a small toddling girl that used to coax me to let her feed the pigs and have the smallest to play with. It's a weary, weary world; but it wasn't altogether worn out and good for nothing while our Elspet was in it with her bright eyes and her merry laugh. But since the spell fell on her, what little sunshine was left in it is all gone."

"And thy wife after it," said mother. "Girls are changeable, and have their odd fancies and likings, as other young things. It's time Elspet grew sober; there's her marriage to be thought of, and when she's a house and a husband to care for, she'll have little time for idle fancies."

"Hasn't, indeed!" granted Tante Anna; "as to that, marriage don't always mend matters, and some husbands are worse than none."

"We have a son to thank God for," said mother; and they spoke of other things.

It seems to me, in looking back, as if I was often now hearing the others talk, catching stray words and looks, and piecing them together in my mind, as though I were busy over some strange embroidered story quite apart from myself and studied the pattern carefully from my distant standing-ground. It was partly that a habit of silence seemed growing on me and that I went about my work mechanically, so that my idle mind was listening to others, and overhearing much insensibly to myself.

One day it was mother's voice talking to Gustav at the work-pile.

"She has such a strange fixed look, it troubles me, my son; has anything come between you? It worries me to watch her, and my heart aches when I see her and eyes."

CHEMISTRY is furnishing us new agents for fuel, force, food and many other important aids over these we once possessed. Ports from which commerce was driven during the hot months by their terrible fevers, are visited all the year with impunity now. Many localities in the South and West kept tenantless by their deleterious miasmas are now filling up with populations under the protection of Ayer's Agree Cure. Their afflictions Chills and Fevers are so effectively cured by this remedy that the disease no longer turns emigration aside or destroys the settler if he ventures upon its infected districts.—Gavette, Independence, Mo.

If you feel dull, despondent, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or Biliousness. Nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext. or Golden Medical Discovery. It also cures all the whole system. Sold by druggists. To avoid counterfeits see that Dr. Pierce's U.S. Government Stamp is on the outside wrapper.

—One of the very best health producing articles of wear, both for ladies and gentlemen, are the Piro-Action Braes. We have tried them on ourself and found them excellent. Heads of families who wish their children to grow up healthy men and women, should not fail to get them. Mr. C. H. Barr, 818 Market Street, is the sole agent for the Pacific Coast. Two lady agents can find profitable employment by applying at the above places.

CHILDREN'S BOARDING INSTITUTE.—We call the especial attention of all, wishing to give their children to board and, at the same time secure for them a good education, to the card in another column of Dr. Mayerhofer, a gentleman well and favorably known in our community.

WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY is a pleasant remedy for every kind of a cough, and irritation of the breathing apparatus; it is a safe remedy; it is a powerful remedy; it is a speedy remedy; it is a remedy that cures.

PERSONAL.

Dr. P. Hiller, for the last seven years so well and extensively known in this section as a physician and surgeon, left Virginia at noon to-day for San Francisco, where he will henceforward reside and practice his profession in a more extended and lucrative field than this at the present time. Now that he has left, we cannot consistently be accused of attempting to favor him in a business way by writing this item; but as, like all prominent men, the Doctor has been willfully misrepresented in some points, and unjustly dealt with in others, we simply through sincere and appreciative friendship assume the privilege of saying a few good words for him at parting. We do not propose to discuss his merits as a homoeopathic physician and against those of the old school; he has fought his own battles pretty well thus far, and is fully able to continue doing so. We simply judge of him from square personal observation and particularly good facilities for so doing. The world judges doctors, the same as other men, by the great criterion of success, and only the envious and ignorant will allow their prejudices to pervert their honest convictions. During his past seven years' practice at Virginia City, Dr. Hiller has been remarkably successful, losing very few patients indeed compared with the immense number of cases coming under his care. This has been particularly observable in his confinement cases, and also the cholera morbus, small-pox and other epidemics. He is a well-read physician, has deeply studied his profession, and therefore his practice has been no experimental guess work, but the result of enlightened views and experience. Indeed, his graveyard record is a good one, and one which he need not be, and is not, ashamed of. Many prominent citizens of Virginia, Gold Hill and vicinity have died through sickness these seven years, but few or none of them under Dr. Hiller's care. It has been, and is quite common with those prejudiced against him and his homoeopathic practice, to attribute his unequalled success to "luck," not real ability; yet allowing even that, it is a pretty good thing in this world of chances to have luck on one's side. His surgical practice has come more under immediately under our personal observation; therefore, we say that he has undertaken more intricate, difficult and important surgical cases—prominent capital operations, such as attract public notice—with better success than any other surgeon in this section during the seven years of which we speak. Like the rest of us, Dr. Hiller has his faults and peculiarities, but he certainly is both earnest and honest in his convictions and practice. An upright, good citizen, earnestly sustaining all beneficial public institutions, his true worth will be better appreciated now that he is gone. His estimable family follow him in a few days to their new home at the Bay City, and a large circle of warm, firm and true friends, grieving to bid the good physician and his family farewell from our midst, unite in heartfelt well wishes for the success and prosperity of both him and his.—Gold Hill Evening News.

Dr. HILLER has now established himself in this city.

SKATING.—At the Pavilion, a skating club for children has been opened. The health of the little ones can only be benefited by the gentle exercise which skating gives to the body.

—Printing of every description is done at lowest rates, and in the very best manner, by our friend Calhoun, No. 540 Market street, opposite Grand Hotel.

—Drugs and chemicals of every description, also all kinds of perfumery and toilet articles, can be had at the Pioneer Drug Store of Sam. Adams & Co., No. 218 Bush street, at very low rates.

STOW FOUNDATION PAVEMENT.—We call the especial attention of all our readers to the article published in our advertising columns by the City Paving Company. This article shows that the Stow Foundation Pavement is not alone the best, but also the cheapest and most durable pavement ever invented.

THE AMERICAN SAFETY LAMP.—The splendid lamp which has been examined and approved by the Government and several eminent chemists, is the safety lamp for consuming kerosene oil, and should not fail in every household. We recommend the same to all our readers. The lamp is for sale at Rosenblum, Lubin & Co., 820 and 822 Market street.

—We call the attention of our readers to the card of Messrs. Wieland Brothers, commission merchants, which will be found in another column of this paper.

REMOVAL.—Messrs. Foster & Stuart have removed their office to No. 418 California street.

Wir machen unsere Refer auf die in einer andern Spalte befindliche Karte des Herrn Ernst Schmidt, Reichmanns, No. 18 No. 2, der Montgomery & Merchant Straßengangs befonders aufmerksam.

—Mirrors and pictures of all kinds; also, looking-glasses and frames of great variety, can always be found at very low prices, by J. O. Parkinson, No. 333 Kearny street.

LUMBER.—Messrs. Knowland & Deo have opened a general lumber business at the corner of Howard & Spear streets, and will sell all kinds of lumber at lowest rates. Give them a call.

WHERE TO BUY CIGARS.—We call the attention of cigar dealers in the city and country to the fact, that Mr. Jacob Liebes has removed his Cigar Factory to No. 266 Front street, corner of California. Mr. Liebes is enabled through superior facilities to sell the best cigars at very low prices, and everyone before purchasing elsewhere, should call and examine his stock.

DREAMS AND THEIR CAUSES.

BY AN OLD PHYSICIAN.

The basis of dreams, as Dr. Hammond observes, must be sought for in impressions made upon the mind at some previous period, or produced at the time, during sleep, by bodily sensations. At first sight it may seem that we have dreams which cannot possibly be referred to either of these exciting causes; "but thorough investigation will invariably reveal the existence of an association between the dream and some such cause or event. In confirmation of this view he adduces several cases some of which he has collected from the well-known works of Abercrombie, "Inquiries Concerning the Intellectual Powers and the Investigation of Truth," Macaulay ("Philosophy of Sleep," "Dandy" ("Philosophy of Mystery," and other British writers; while others are original and new first published. From the latter we borrow the following remarkable history, which in some respects resembles the story told by Sir Walter Scott to Abercrombie, regarding the recovery, by means of a dream, of lost documents necessary for the successful prosecution of a law suit. A lawyer, well-known to Dr. Hammond, found it necessary to ascertain the exact age of a client of his, who was also his cousin. Their grandfather, who was rather an eccentric person, had died when they were boys. The lawyer often told his cousin that if the grandfather had been alive the desired information could have been readily obtained; and that he had a dim recollection of having seen a record kept by the old gentleman, and of their being some peculiarity about it which he could not recall. Some months after the search had been given up as hopeless, he dreamed that their grandfather came to him and said: "You have been trying to find out when I was born. Don't you recollect that one afternoon, when we were fishing, I read you some lines from an Elzevir 'Horace,' and showed you how I made a family record out of the book by inserting a number of blank leaves at the end? Now, as you know, I devised my library to the Rev. —. I was a great fool for giving him books which he will never read! Get the 'Horace,' and you will discover the exact hour at which I was born." The lawyer, deeply impressed with the dream, started by the first morning train to visit the clergyman, who lived in a neighboring city; found the "Horace" and at the end were the pages constituting the family record, exactly as had been described in the dream. By no effort of his memory could he recall to his recollection the incidents of the fishing excursion.

It may have occurred to some of our readers to have experienced the same dream on two or three consecutive nights, or several times in the same night. This repetition of a dream is popularly regarded as indicating that it is either sent as a warning, or that it has a prophetic character. Dr. Hammond tells us that a few years ago he read Schiller's "Ode to Laura," as translated by Lord Lytton, beginning:

"Who and what gave me the wish to woo thee?"

and admired it as a striking piece of versification, conveying some noted philosophical idea in a forcible and beautiful manner. The following night he had a vivid dream of a condition of pre-existence in which he imagined himself to be. The connection between the dream and the poem he had been reading was sufficiently well marked, and did not astonish him. He was, however, surprised to find that the two next nights he had exactly the same dream.

The following case, in which a dream—in other respects highly remarkable—occurred twice on the same night, came under the notice of the writer of this article when he was practicing in London, in the year 1848. Our older readers may recollect that, in the year just recorded, there was a terrible case of murder, Dr. Webster, Professor of Chemistry in Harvard College, being convicted for the murder of his acquaintance—we can hardly say his friend—Dr. Parkman. A lady—we will call her X. Y.—well-known in the literary world, and then residing in London, had some years previously, paid a long visit to this country, during which she became intimately acquainted with Dr. Webster and his family, who showed her much kindness and attention. After her return to England, she continued to correspond with the family; and one day, in the early autumn of 1848, a gentleman related to Dr. Parkman, called upon her with an introduction from Professor Webster. On that night she went to bed at her usual hour, but soon experienced a horrible dream. She fancied that she was being urged by Dr. Webster to assist him in concealing a set of human bones in a wooden box; and she distinctly recollected that there was a thigh-bone, which, after failing to break it in pieces, they vainly attempted to insert; but it was too long. While they were trying to hide the box—as she fancied, under her bed—she awoke in a state of terror and cold perspiration. She instantly struck a light, and tried to dispel the recollection of her horrible vision by reading. After a lapse of two hours, during which she had determined fixed her attention on the book, she put out the light, and soon fell asleep. The same dream again occurred; after which she did not dare—although a woman of singular moral and physical courage—to attempt to sleep any more that night. Early on the following morning she called upon the writer, and told him of her fearful experiences of the past night. Nothing more at the time was thought of these dreams; but shortly afterwards the news reached England that Dr. Parkman was missing; that the last time he was seen alive he was entering the college gate; and that the janitor was suspected of having murdered him.

On the writer mentioning this to X. Y., she at once exclaimed, "Oh, my dreams! Dr. Webster must be the murderer!" The next morning she brought the news that the true murderer had been detected; and that, at the very time when X. Y.'s dream occurred, he must have been actually struggling to get bones—the flesh having been previously burnt—into a wooden box such as she had seen; and that, after attempting in vain to break the thigh-bone, he had hidden them elsewhere.

In this remarkable case, the visitor's call and his conversation regarding their mutual friend, may have suggested to the mind of X. Y., the idea of Dr. Webster; but why it should have called him up to her mind as engaged in that singular manner, we admit that we cannot explain, as he had not seen her for several years. It is in the highest degree improbable that, when engaged in this horrible attempt to conceal the evidence of his guilt, he should have been specially thinking of X. Y.; otherwise we might have explained the dream according to the "Brain-wave Theory," propounded in the London Spectator for January 30, 1869. It is possible, but highly improbable, that the idea of the dream might have been called up by the circumstance that X. Y. had been occupied in reading a popular course of lectures on anatomy and physiology for a country physician, and he cannot regard himself as upholding the theory we have propounded, as dreams must be due either to impressions made upon the mind at some previous period, or that they are produced during sleep by bodily sensations.

[TO BE CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT.]

A ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.

In a village in the midst of Bidh resided a highly-respectable Brahmin, with his family. The Brahmin belonged to the class called "Reformers." He had a servant, also a Brahmin, and he frequently tried to instill into the mind of his mental the new doctrines he himself had become inspired with. Among them was the re-marriage of widows, and he endeavored to induce the mental to take unto himself as wife a woman who had tested of the sweets of married life. The servant at last yielded to his master's wishes, and one day formed the wise resolution of wedding a widow. The master, of course, was delighted to hear of the wise resolve came to by his servant, and suggested to the latter the propriety of making known his intention publicly, in such a way as to have it believed that there had been no persuasion used, and that the man was actuated by his own feelings and opinions. It must be observed here that there was a "liaison" between the servant and his mistress, and that she had been frequently importuning him to elope with her, so that they might all the more easily indulge in their illicit amours, without the fear of detection. The servant deemed this a favorable opportunity of which to avail himself to enable him to obtain by fair what he might else be driven to the necessity of securing by foul means; no sooner conceived than resolved, the scheme was put into operation, and the servant, having obtained a loan of money from his master, made the necessary preparations for the nuptials. The mistress of the house was desired by her liege lord to choose a widow as helpmate for the servant from among her numerous acquaintances in the village; this mission was altogether congenial to her wishes, and she appeared to busy herself about the affair by absenting herself frequently from her home. At last she reported that a partner had been found, but that the intended wife did not wish her parents to be in the secret, and the celebration of the marriage was therefore fixed for a certain night on which there was no moonlight, according to Hindoo custom. The auspicious day arrived, and the night came on, when the master, the Brahmin was to tie the nuptial knot, and a number of other "reformers," assembled at the place appointed; the "bride" made her appearance in due time, covered from head to foot, much in the manner of "purdah-ladies;" the marriage ceremony was proceeded with, and the happy couple in due course united in the bonds of wedlock. Prior to the ceremony being concluded the Brahmin asked the master whether he had any objections to offer to the marriage, and whether, if any difficulty should arise in relation to it, he would render his assistance. He answered emphatically in the negative to the first question, and in the affirmative to the second. The meeting dispersed, hearty congratulations having been bestowed on the married couple. Reports were circulated far and wide of the event, and the reforming Brahmin, the master of the servant who had been "espoused," repaired to his home, proud in the consciousness of his having achieved a triumph over orthodox Hindulism. Finding his wife not at her post, he consoled himself with the idea that she had remained with the newly-married couple. On the following morning the hubbub burst, and with it departed the happiness of the unsuspecting Brahmin, who, in his zeal to promote the cause of Hindoo widow-re-marriage, sacrificed his own domestic felicity. The bride widow of the previous night turned out to be his own wife, and the woman whose name had been falsely made use of as being affianced, was in a state of the utmost consternation when, she a strict orthodox Brahmin, found to what a base use her name had been prostituted. Her parents lodged a complaint against the Brahmin for defamation, and the Brahmin, in his turn, charged his servant with cheating and bigamy. Both complaints were filed in the Mamuldar's Court. That functionary, being a "Reformer" as well, made no ado about throwing out the charge of defamation. The charge of bigamy against the servant was disposed of in this wise: The servant pleaded that, according to doctrines instilled into him by his master, not only was a Hindoo widow allowed to re-marry, but also a married woman, if she took a particular fancy to another man. Certain portions of the "Vedas" had been pointed out by his master to be him when the re-marriage question happened to be discussed between them. The line of defence adopted satisfied the Mamuldar, who was as well acquainted with the "Vedas" as was the complainant in the case. The charge was dismissed, the complainant being referred to the civil courts for the indemnification of his marriage expenses.

A Jew Mayor of Rome.—The Rome correspondent of the Tablet comments in indignant terms of the great probability of Samuel Alatri, the Jewish member for Rome, being elevated to the rank of sindaco, or Lord Mayor of that city.

"We have seen (he writes) so much that is incredible within the last ten years that nothing is strange. But that the first magistrate of the capital of Christendom should be chosen from the Ghetto will, if it be realized, be the strangest and most shameful phase in the history of Roman dishonor. Samuel is a rich banker, and a Roman Rothschild, and personally I believe him to be a much more honest man than the miserable rascals who are about to elect him."

From what we have heard, there is scarcely any doubt of our co-religionist attaining the post of honor; and thus a new era will dawn for the Jews of Rome. Emancipated, liberated from the filth and contamination of the Ghetto, endowed with all the privileges of citizens, they must thank the liberal government of Italy, for the freedom they now enjoy. Now is the time for our Roman brethren to rise from the obscurity into which the Papal authority of Rome had cast them, and to show the world, when treated as men and brothers, they can exhibit as much talent and energy in the cause of civilization as any of the most enlightened nations of the whole world.—J. E.

HOMESTEAD LOTS
ON FIVE YEARS CREDIT, WITHOUT INTEREST.
LEWIS HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION

400 Shares, $500 ea. b. Payable in monthly installments of ten Dollars, a golden rule, with lot 125 Feet by 240 Feet, for Six Hundred Dollars.
Distribution, by Drawing for order of Choice. No Premium to pay. Each Shareholder selects his own lot.
The property of this Association is located in the choicest portions of the City and County of San Francisco, the most pleasant and picture-like location for suburban residences in the city. It is to a great extent sheltered from the prevailing summer winds and fogs, and commands a magnificent view of the Bay and the Alameda shore. It is not as frequently the case with Homestead Associations, a mixture of good and bad, but every lot is good. Several of the principal streets running through the property have been graded, and every lot now offered is easily accessible for building and immediate occupation, without further necessary expenditure for street grading; and none of the lots require grading or filling in.
A large portion of the Blocks are fenced, and the remaining will be immediately enclosed. Four thousand Evergreen trees will be set out on the property (about ten trees to each lot), a portion of them each Winter, commencing this season, until the whole number are set out.
Railroad communication with the business center of the City, at an early day, is certain. A large portion of the fund necessary is already guaranteed, and within one year we confidently predict the work will be achieved.
A reference to the May accompanying the Articles of Association will show the proposed route of the road.
All can readily see the effect of railroad communication upon the value of the property.
The property is a portion of the Bernal Rancho, a confirmed Mexican Grant, upon which the United States Patent has been issued. The perfect validity of the title has never been questioned.
Certificates of Stock issued on payment of the first installment of Ten Dollars, which is for the month of January 1871.
Persons desiring to visit the property with a view to purchasing, will be taken out and returned, free of expense.
The Subscription Book is now open, and copies of the Articles of Association and Maps of the property may be had at the office of the Secretary, 306 Montgomery Street, SAN FRANCISCO.

The Great Trial of Sewing Machines! The Grandest in the world! The Judges the whole world, and the trial fifteen years' duration. Practical use the test.
The universal verdict: "The Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine the Champion."
The Wheeler & Wilson, as is well-known, has won at every trial in which it has competed, the highest award of merit. The representatives of other machines, ever confident, have entered the list time and again, only to be defeated and to testify the value of premiums. They have endeavored to deny the value of premiums, but are not slow, however, to boast of the few they have received. But in the grand trial—daily use throughout the world, where only true merit finds favor and superiority wins the race—the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine stands triumphantly the champion of the verdict of the people.
These Machines are adapted to every variety of Sewing, from the lightest muslins to the heaviest cloths. They work equally well upon Silk, Linen, Woolen or Cotton Goods, with Silk, Linen, or Cotton Thread, Seaming, Quil-ling, Gathering, Hemming, Felling, Cording, Tucking, Braiding, Embroidering, and making Button Holes, with the greatest facility.
If it is inconvenient for the purchaser to visit the sales-room, the order may be forwarded to the office, and it will be as faithfully filled as if the selection had been made personally. Full instructions, recently compiled, and giving full information upon every point in detail, accompany each machine, and enable the most inexperienced to operate without difficulty. Our interest in the successful working of Machines is not second to that of the purchaser, and we esteem it a privilege to aid, by correspondence, or otherwise, anyone requiring it.

PRACTICAL PRINTERS.
IT IS UNDERSTOOD THAT A LARGE AMOUNT of Printing has been recently going East in consequence of the inability of the Printing Houses on this coast to compete with the Eastern Houses in point of cheapness. In order to overcome this difficulty and retain in San Francisco this trade on our capital, Practical Book and Job Printers of this city have formed an Association under the name of the SAN FRANCISCO

Co-operative Printing Co.,
And have purchased WADE'S EXTENSIVE ES-TABLISHMENT, where they are prepared to execute all descriptions of BOOK, NEWS-PAPEE and JOB PRINTING in a style unsurpassed by any house on this Coast, at Eastern Prices!

If the best workman, the newest and finest styles of type and steam presses can accomplish such a result.

I do not wish to inform you, reader, that Dr. Wonderful, or any other man, has discovered a remedy that cures Consumption, when the lungs are half consumed, in short, will cure all diseases whether of mind, body, or estate, make men live forever, and leave death to play for want of work, and is designed to make our sublimity sphere a blissful Paradise, to which Heaven itself shall be but a wide show. You have heard enough of that kind of humbuggery. But when I tell you that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will positively cure the worst cases of Catarrh in the head, I only assert that which thousands can testify to. I will pay $500 Reward for a case that I cannot cure. A pamphlet giving symptoms and other information sent free to any address. This remedy is SOLD BY MOST DRUGGISTS IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Price 50 cents. Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of sixty cents, or four packages for two dollars. Beware of cheap imitations and worthless imitations. See that my private Stamp, which is a positive guarantee of Genuineness, is upon the outside wrapper. Remember that this private Stamp, issued by the United States Government, expressly for stamping my medicines, has a portrait, name and address, and the words "U. S. Certificate of Genuineness, engraved upon it, and need not be mistaken. Don't be deceived by travelers and others representing themselves as Dr. Sage; I am the only man now living that has the knowledge and right to manufacture the genuine Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I never travel to sell this medicine.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

WILD CHERRY

My Extract Sarsaparilla is a Blood Purifier; my Extract Broom is a Diuretic, and will act as such in all cases. Both are prepared on purely scientific principles, in vacuo, and are the most active measures of either that can be made. A ready and conclusive test will be a comparison of their properties with those set forth in the following works:

See Professor Day's valuable works on the Practice of Physio.

See remarks made by the celebrated Dr. F. A. J. Philadel.

See remarks made by Dr. S. M. McDowell, a celebrated Physician and Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, and published in the Transactions of the King and Queen's Journal.

See Medical-Chirurgical Review, published by BENJAMIN T. WISTAR, Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons. See most of the latest standard works on Medicine.

WISTAR'S BALSAM does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it, cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thereby removing the cause of the complaint. None genuine unless signed I. Broom. Prepared by S. W. FOWLE & SON, Boston. Sold by REDDINGTON, HOSKIN & CO., San Francisco, and by Dealers generally.

H. T. HELMBOLD'S

GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED" COMPOUND

FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU

A positive and specific Remedy for all cases of Standard, Bladder, Gravel, and Disposition to "Stagnation" or "Swelling."

This medicine increases the power of digestion, and excites the absorption into healthy action, by which the matter of catarrhal discharges, and all morbid humors are removed, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for men, women and children.

It is a safe and reliable Remedy, and has been used by thousands of persons who have obtained the most beneficial results.

H. T. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Debauchery, Early Indulgence, attended with the following Symptoms:

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Power, Weak Memory, Diminution of Breathing, Trembling, Headaches, Pain in the Back, Stiffness of the Limbs, Eruptions of the Face, Universal Lassitude, and all the symptoms of a debilitated system.

These symptoms, if allowed to continue, will lead to the most dangerous and fatal diseases.

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION?

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess it. The disorder of the brain systems and the melancholy deaths by consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

The Constitution, once affected by organic weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which H. T. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT OF BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

No Family should be without it.

Take no Bileam, Mercury, or unpleasant medicine for venereal and dangerous diseases.

H. T. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

AND

IMPROVED ROSE WASH,

Cures Secret Diseases.

In all their stages—little expense, little or no change of diet, no inconvenience, and NO EXPOSURE.

USE H. T. HELMBOLD'S

Extract Buchu

For all affectionate diseases of the organs, whether

EXISTING IN MALE OR FEMALE.

From whatever cause originating, and no matter how long standing. Diseases of these organs require the aid of a diuretic.

H. T. Helmbold's Extract Buchu

is the Great Diuretic.

And it is certain to have the desired effect in all diseases for which it is recommended.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!

H. T. HELMBOLD'S

Highly Concentrated Compound

FLUID EXTRACT SANSAPARILLA,

For purifying the Blood, removing all chronic constitutional diseases arising from an impure state of the Blood; and the only reliable and efficient known remedy for the cure of Scrofula, Salt Head, Salt Rheum, Pains and Swellings of the Bones, Ulcerations of the Throat and Legs, Blisters, Pimples on the Face, Tetters, Erysipelas, and all early Eruptions of the Skin.

THE GREAT PICTORIAL ANNUAL.

Hostetter's California Almanac for 1871, for distribution, every, throughout California, Oregon, and other States and Territories of the Pacific slope, will be published about the first of January, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health should read and ponder the valuable suggestions it contains. In addition to an admirable medical treatise on the causes, prevention and cure of a great variety of diseases, it embraces a large amount of information interesting to the merchant, the mechanic, the miner, the farmer, the painter, and professional man; and the calculations have been made for such meridians and latitudes as are most suitable for a correct and comprehensive CALENDAR.

The nature, uses, and extraordinary sanitary effects of HOSSETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, the staple tonic and alterative of more than half the Christian world, are fully set forth in its pages, which are also interspersed with pictorial illustrations, valuable recipes for the household and farm, humorous anecdotes, and other instructive and amusing reading matter, original and selected. Among the Almanacs to appear with the opening of the year, this will be one of the most useful, and MAY BE HAD FOR THE ALMS. Send for copies to the nearest dealer in HOSSETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. The Bitters are sold in every city, town and village, and are extensively used throughout the entire civilized world.

TAKEN INTERNALLY.
It cures sudden Colds, and Weak Stomach, General Debility, Burning Sore Mouth, Canker, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Cramps or Pain in the Stomach, Bowel Complaint, Piles, Colic, Asiatic Cholera, Diarrhea and Dysentery.

APPLIED EXTERNALLY.
Cures Felons, Boils, and Old Sores, Swelling Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Bruises and Sprains, Severe Rheumatism, Ringworms and Tetter, Broken Breasts, Frosted Feet and Chapped Hands, Itch of the Face, Neuralgia and Rheumatism. It is a sure remedy for Ague, Chills and Fever.

PAIN KILLER.
Taken internally, should be adulterated with milk or water, or made into a syrup with molasses. For a Cough a few drops on sugar, eaten, will be more effective than anything else.

See printed directions, which accompany each bottle.

Sold by all Druggists.
